WEATHER OF CONCERN

Northern California

- A wet week is ahead. Storm #1 will move in late Monday and continue into Wednesday with widespread rainfall, mountain snow, and breezy winds. Mountain travel will be impacted as snow levels drop on Tuesday below pass levels. Storm #2 follows quickly on the heels of Storm #1 with another round of soaking rain for the valley, mountain snow, this time down to 3500-4500 feet, and breezy winds. Mountain travel impacts will continue.

Southern California

- Light to moderate rain is expected to affect the region early today. Peak rainfall rates between 0.20 and 0.40 inches per hour are expected in the mountains and foothills, including the recent burn areas. There is a 20% chance of intensities reaching the minimum USGS threshold of 0.50 inches per hour for debris flow, but impacts to burn areas should be minimal.
